"M. M. J." asks for a cure for asthma. I have foit that I ought to reply. I know that the free-eating of water cress will greatly benefit, if not offect a permanent cure. By free use I mean at each meal and as long as it can be obtained. My father suggested it to a gentleman at one time who had suffered with it for years, and he found great relief from its use. I greatly enjoy our helpful columns and am glad to contribute even a little.

I can give one of your correspondents information as to what States prohibit first cousins marrying. Marriage between first cousins is prohibited in the following States: Arlzona, Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Montana, Newalia, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Ohio, Okiahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wyoming. Thus you will see that only seventeen States in the Union prohibit it. In my opinion, there ought to be laws enacted to prohibit it in all States. I personally show of several such cases where the children are idiots, cripples or silly. In one case in a small family of five children who are idiots, cripples and silly. The oldest is over thirty years old, and has never walked and Popper all sills. The oldest is over thirty. ily of five children who are idiots, cripples and silly. The oldest is over thirty years old, and has never walked a step. They all sit in invalid chairs and are cared for like hables. None can talk. They only grunt and drool at the mouth. Yet there are only seventeen States in the Union that prohibit such marriages! There should be laws passed that would forbid it in the other twenty-eight States and Territories. I do not recollect what your correspondent's initials are, but I hope she will give up the thought, if she contemplates marrying an own first cousin. Steprelatives are not permitted to marry except in California, Colorado, Florida, Goorgia, Idaho, Minnesota, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Utah and Wisconsin.

Thalassa: Thalassa: By Brownies Brown.
Of this poem Thomas Wentworth Higginson says (in the Outlook, February, 1890;) "It is so magnificent that it cheapens most of its contemporary literature, and is alone worth a life otherwise obscure. When all else of American literature has vanished who knows but that some single masterpiece like this may remain to show the high-water mark, not merely of a poet, but of a nation and a civilization?"

mothers."

It was General Lew Wallace, the author of "Ben Hur." I am sure General Wallace did not mean to show the irreverence the mother who wrote to you thought he did. I have always liked this quotation, though if one takes it literally it is not true.

C. M. G.

Somebody asks for the source of "God could not be everywhere, so He made mothers." I think it is found in the Taimud. I do not know if it is called "heretical."

In the same paper a mother asks advice about a child who breaths with his mouth open. Perhaps he has catarrh.

For the benefit of "L. O. T." and others of your readers to whom the knowledge may be useful, I wish to recommend the Salvation Army as one of the very best agencies for finding lost people. It is one of the numerous branches of their work, maintained under the guidance of experienced men or women, and as every officer of the Salvation Army is ex-officio agent for this branch of the work, the facilities for this work are greater than those at the disposal of most detective agencies. Besides, where financial reasons may never prevent any one from seeking ald from a detective agency, such reasons may never prevent any one from seeking the assistance of the Salvation Army, as they cheerfully reader such assistance free of charge, where applicant is unable to pay.

I saw in a late paper "H. H.'s" request for something to preserve sweet cider, and f hasten to do my small share for thie household, as I have very often regolved many valuable hints through your column.

When the cider is sweet, or you may let it "work" to the desired tartness, put in bottles as near the same size as possible, place these on a board in a wash boiler, fill to the necks of the bottles with tepid water, cover tightly, bring water to a boil, and allow ten minutes after water is boiling, remove bottles and cork tightly. This will keep for months, and tastes like new apple cider. It seems a great deal of trouble, but when you take into consideration that no acid is used, it is worth the trouble. I preserve all of my fruit in this way.

And now my mite about bedbugs. If the believers in gasoline will make a solution of camphor by adding camphor gum to the gasoline, as much as will dissolve, they will find this a sure death to the enemy whenever they come in contact with it, and the plain gasoline will not kill. I have been vory much interested in the formaldehyde experiences, and was very much disappointed that this useful preparation does not do away with those pests.
